

Faith

During a most difficult time, I asked a friend,

“Why Me, Why Now?”

His response was insightful and powerful,

“Why not You, Why not Now?”

When I use the word faith, I use it to encapsulate the idea that we all have something we believe in. We have a set of ideas and ideals that we live by and strive after. You don't have to believe in God to treat people with decency, respect, and love. In the political atmosphere which we live today, we need examples of people who can talk to anyone, and more importantly, listen to anyone.

The moment we stop listening to one another is the moment we start treating each other as being different from ourselves. It is the moment we start to define ourselves by our differences and not by our similarities. I look to what unites us. We all should have faith in the future for everyone.

Chris Pratt needs to be complimented for leading out at the MTV Awards to describe how he views Faith. At a time of great division within this country, we need to encourage people to recognize their Faith and to believe in the decency of humanity.

Take time to believe in yourself and ask yourself the question, “Why not Me and Why not now”. Take time to understand who you are and what your potential may include. Taking this simple step will allow for you to start seeing miraculous events occur in your life.

Begin to have Faith in others. Once you begin to see your potential, then you will begin to see the potential in others. You will then have confidence to lift others, knowing that there is an abundance of resources to be enjoyed.

As we individually become stronger in our Faith for a brighter future, and others begin to believe likewise, we will see our communities transformed with people doing good out of choice and not because of a government mandate. Agency to choose is a right granted to each American, a Freedom to be cherished. Take time to gain perspective on who we are and how miraculous it is that we exist to have opportunities to excel and improve.
